

Vaginal Yeast Infections

Yeast infections can occur in different parts of the body. Vaginal yeast infections are incredibly common and are very treatable. Some women complain of some or all of the following symptoms: white, clumpy, vaginal discharge, itching, burning, swelling and redness, or pain with intercourse.

Because symptoms of a yeast infection can mimic other vaginal infections, the wellness center advises students to call and make a gynecology appointment. The doctor or gynecologist will review with you your symptoms, make a plan of health care tailored to you and let you know if any medications are needed or follow-up appointments. Please call 330-263-2319 for your appointment.
